Program President Prof. Vinay Kumar Pathak said that this year is a challenging year. We have to prepare to fight new diseases this year. Along with this, you will also have to move forward financially. We all need change. Our first resolution should be to serve the society this New Year. The students who have been rewarded today should understand the importance of service and at the same time serve according to their ability. He said that from next year onwards, such students would also be honored, who have contributed in social service, developed new technology or made any innovation in diagnostic/physiotherapy.

The chief guest of the program, GSVM Principal Prof. Sanjay Kala said that students should make wonderful efforts in their field/study. Students should learn perseverance from the tortoise and swiftness from the hare. He said that the time to come is of Artificial Intelligence. Students should not be limited to just getting a degree. Apply what is learned at the grassroots level and learn more and more about new technologies and use them for social welfare. He said that it is the responsibility of all of us to return what we have taken from the society in double form.

Dr. Vandana Pathak, the special guest in the program said that we should follow the benefits of our ancient system (Ayurveda) in our life. Today, one of the main reasons for the number of patients seen in the hospital is that we do not follow our routine properly. She said that we should keep our objective clear. Along with this, everyone should fulfill their duty towards the society with full devotion. She said that we should adopt yoga in our life.

Giving the memorandum of thanks, the President of Prayas Sanstha, Dr. S.P. Singh said that along with education, our conduct and behavior should also be good.
