About the Conference:

Various efforts have been made for the development and promotion of Indian languages, and even today these efforts are being undertaken with multiple perspectives at the center. The twenty-first century, with science at its core, is providing ever-new technological and pedagogical tools related to teaching and learning. As a result of these technological advances, artificial intelligence has now entered the world of education as well. Against this backdrop, the objective of the two-day conference “Bhartiya Bhasha Parivar & Artificial Intelligence: Challenges & Possibilities in the 21st Century” is to bring linguists, teachers, researchers and policy experts onto a common platform, so that while engaging with two recent works, Indian Language Family: A New Framework in Linguistics and Collected Studies on Indian Language Family: Perspectives and Horizons, they may exchange ideas within the broader framework of Indian languages and artificial intelligence. In fact, these works propose a new dimension in the study of Indian languages, moving beyond colonial linguistic classifications and foregrounding the interrelatedness of India’s linguistic and cultural heritage.

This conference will serve as an academic forum for reviewing the ideas, methodologies, and impacts of these two books on linguistics, education, translation, and digital innovation. Participants will critically evaluate the proposed framework of “Bhartiya Bhasha Parivar & Artificial Intelligence: Challenges & Possibilities in the 21st Century” through various sessions, panel discussions, and interactive reviews. They will also be able to assess how relevant this framework is to the decolonization of linguistic thought, the promotion of mother-tongue-based education, and the strengthening of India’s multilingual unity. Moreover, it will be established that the relationship between Indian language families and artificial intelligence is not merely a technological dialogue, but also a determinant of the social, cultural, and educational future. The twenty-first century offers Indian languages an opportunity to gain a new global identity, provided that sustained and scientifically grounded efforts are made to technologically empower these languages.
